WEEKEND MASSES:

Saturday 5:00 pm, Sunday 8:30 am and 10:30 am

Sixth Sunday of Easter—May 6, 2018 "No Partiality" Deacon Dennis Walters

On Sunday, April 29th after 10:30 Mass, the Youth Group gathered in the Fr. Fisher Hall for a game of Fear Factor. The purpose of the game was to teach them that when they have Jesus, they have nothing to fear.

On Monday, April 30th during Religious Education classes Fr. Bosco and the students spent some time outdoors picking up sticks and trash in the yard of the Parish Center to prepare for lawn mowing.

“Then Peter proceeded to speak and said, ‘In truth, I see that God shows no partiality. Rather, in every nation, whoever fears Him and acts uprightly is acceptable to Him.’”

At Easter Vigil 2001, Sue and I had the privilege of assisting at the reception into the Catholic Church of fifty-two members of an African-American Pentecostal congregation. I was the sponsor for their pastor, Alex Jones, and Sue was the sponsor for his sister Gwen. His three children and their families also came into the Church. There were so many others that both of us had to sponsor more than one person, which caused a gigantic melee in the sanctuary. It was one of the most glory-filled moments of my life.

The whole group had completed RCIA at St. Suzanne’s, an all-white parish, because it was physically closest to Maranatha Church from which Pastor Jones’s congregation had come. That was convenient for them, but burdensome for St. Suzanne’s. The parish was so small at the time that the rear pews had been removed for coffee and doughnuts, and so elderly that some ushers used walkers. Overnight, the size of the parish doubled. To have fifty-two young, hand-clapping Pentecostals suddenly join them was — to say the least — a shock to the parish.

This example might give some insight into the situation Peter faced when, at the Lord’s bidding, he welcomed into Christianity a unit commander of the Roman army of occupation, his whole household, and probably several of their friends. Peter and his companions, all Jews, had never before done the unlawful thing of entering the home of Gentiles, accepting their hospitality, and fraternizing with them. But when the Holy Spirit poured out on them the same charismatic gifts of tongues and praise as He had on themselves, Peter had no other choice but to welcome them into the Church on an equal footing with himself. His decision would grow the Church, but it would pose problems for him and for them.

Criticism for his decision was swift in coming. According to the Acts of the Apostles, Peter twice had to answer complaints of Jewish Christians about receiving Gentiles into Christianity without circumcising them first. As for the newly baptized Gentiles, their new faith demanded getting used to a way of life very different from the paganism they grew up in; for example, they had to learn new forms of worship, and practice forms of moral self-control foreign to their culture.

Examples like these give some traction to Jesus’ command for Christians to love one another. Love can’t be an abstraction or an ideal when a group of strangers with outlandish customs and habits suddenly enters the peaceful life of your comfortable community, expecting to be welcomed there. As Peter and his companions discovered, loving one another sometimes has to be learned very quickly, and both sides have lots to learn.

Jesus’ command to love calls for obedience. We obey by choosing to love; and, if all goes well, feelings of love will follow. Further, Jesus’ command to love has a qualifier: “Love as I have loved you.” That means that the standard of our love for others is not what we think is good or appropriate, but what Jesus shows as His love for us; namely, laying down our lives for each other. It’s not comfortable, it’s not convenient, but it’s how we imitate God.

Peter came to Cornelius’s house in response to a vision, in which God said that what He calls clean Peter was not to call unclean. In effect, God was telling him that he had to lay down his view of what was okay. God shows no partiality: His love — and therefore ours — extends to everyone, including (perhaps especially) people we’d rather not have to deal with. The love God commands is more than simply tolerating others, living our own private lives and hoping others live theirs. I used to tell people in a prayer group I led, “If you love me, bother me.” I’ve gotten away from that, but I need to return to it. Loving others means bothering and being bothered.

Peter’s decision to include Gentiles in what had been Jewish Christianity fulfilled the biblical vision in which “the Nations” would join Israel. The first Christians knew those Scriptures, but now they were expected to make that happen. The process did create problems; everyone from the Church’s leaders on down needed to learn through experience what God meant by “showing no partiality; rather, in every nation, whoever fears Him and acts uprightly is acceptable to Him.” Uncomfortable, yes; inconvenient, yes. But what a glad inconvenience.

In the Fall, we plan to run another Alpha Course, and it’s possible that some people very different from us might decide to enter the Church through St. Mary’s. While I don’t expect anything like what happened at St. Suzanne’s in 2001 to happen here, their experience tells us something. If it turned out that all of the Pentecostals in town were to come into the Church here with their families, we could expect that everything at St. Mary’s would change. There would be a lot more noise. Even the liturgy would change — it might become a lot more exuberant. Of course, they would have to adapt to Catholic ways. But how would we adapt? Our job would be to incorporate them into our Catholic family and love them there. Would we? ☞
